Meet Wu.

Wu is a creature of tall, thin body, with a round face, black eyes, and slightly curly hair. Wu seems friendly.

But the second and third, and fourth look show that something is off.

There is a cloud above Wu's head. You may wonder why there is a cloud above Wu's head.

Oh yes. Wu is often in a bad mood.

He is considered a grumpy creature. Why is that you ask? Wu has an answer.

It is because he always, ALWAYS encounters difficult beings. And, in general, his life is just difficult.

He observes that others are always not nice to him. This is why, according to Wu's reasoning, there is a cloud above his head.

Also, this is why he is just not nice.

So, today is just another day for Wu, who lives with a cloud above his head. And what happened today is proving that he is right in his reasoning.

But what happened, you might ask?

Wu wanted to play. He took his favorite ball and went outside.

But others came.

They just jumped in, started to play with the ball, started to laugh.

He was so angry. They did not ask him if they could join! And for sure they were laughing at him.

He did not want any companion. He wanted to play alone.

So, he shouted and screamed, and kicked them, and finally, he just left the place, leaving the ball behind, together with a bunch of surprised creatures.

He was so angry...

As you can see, others are unbelievably bad towards him. It is understandable that he is so angry.

Right?

Would it surprise you to learn that Wu does not have friends?

It is because others are bad towards him, yes.

But is it?

You already know Wu a bit. Is it possible that to make friends, both sides should cooperate, respect, treat each other nicely?

With the attitude Wu has towards other creatures is hard to see him making friends.

Until one day. Because one day, Wu met Kun.

Please, meet Kun.
